

FARMS

of Martha's Vineyard

THIS FARM MAP IS LIKE A TREASURE MAP. Use it as a guide to find what's for dinner, from Island farmers and shellfishermen, who grow, raise, and catch seasonally fresh vegetables, poultry, meat, eggs, shellfish, and raw milk.

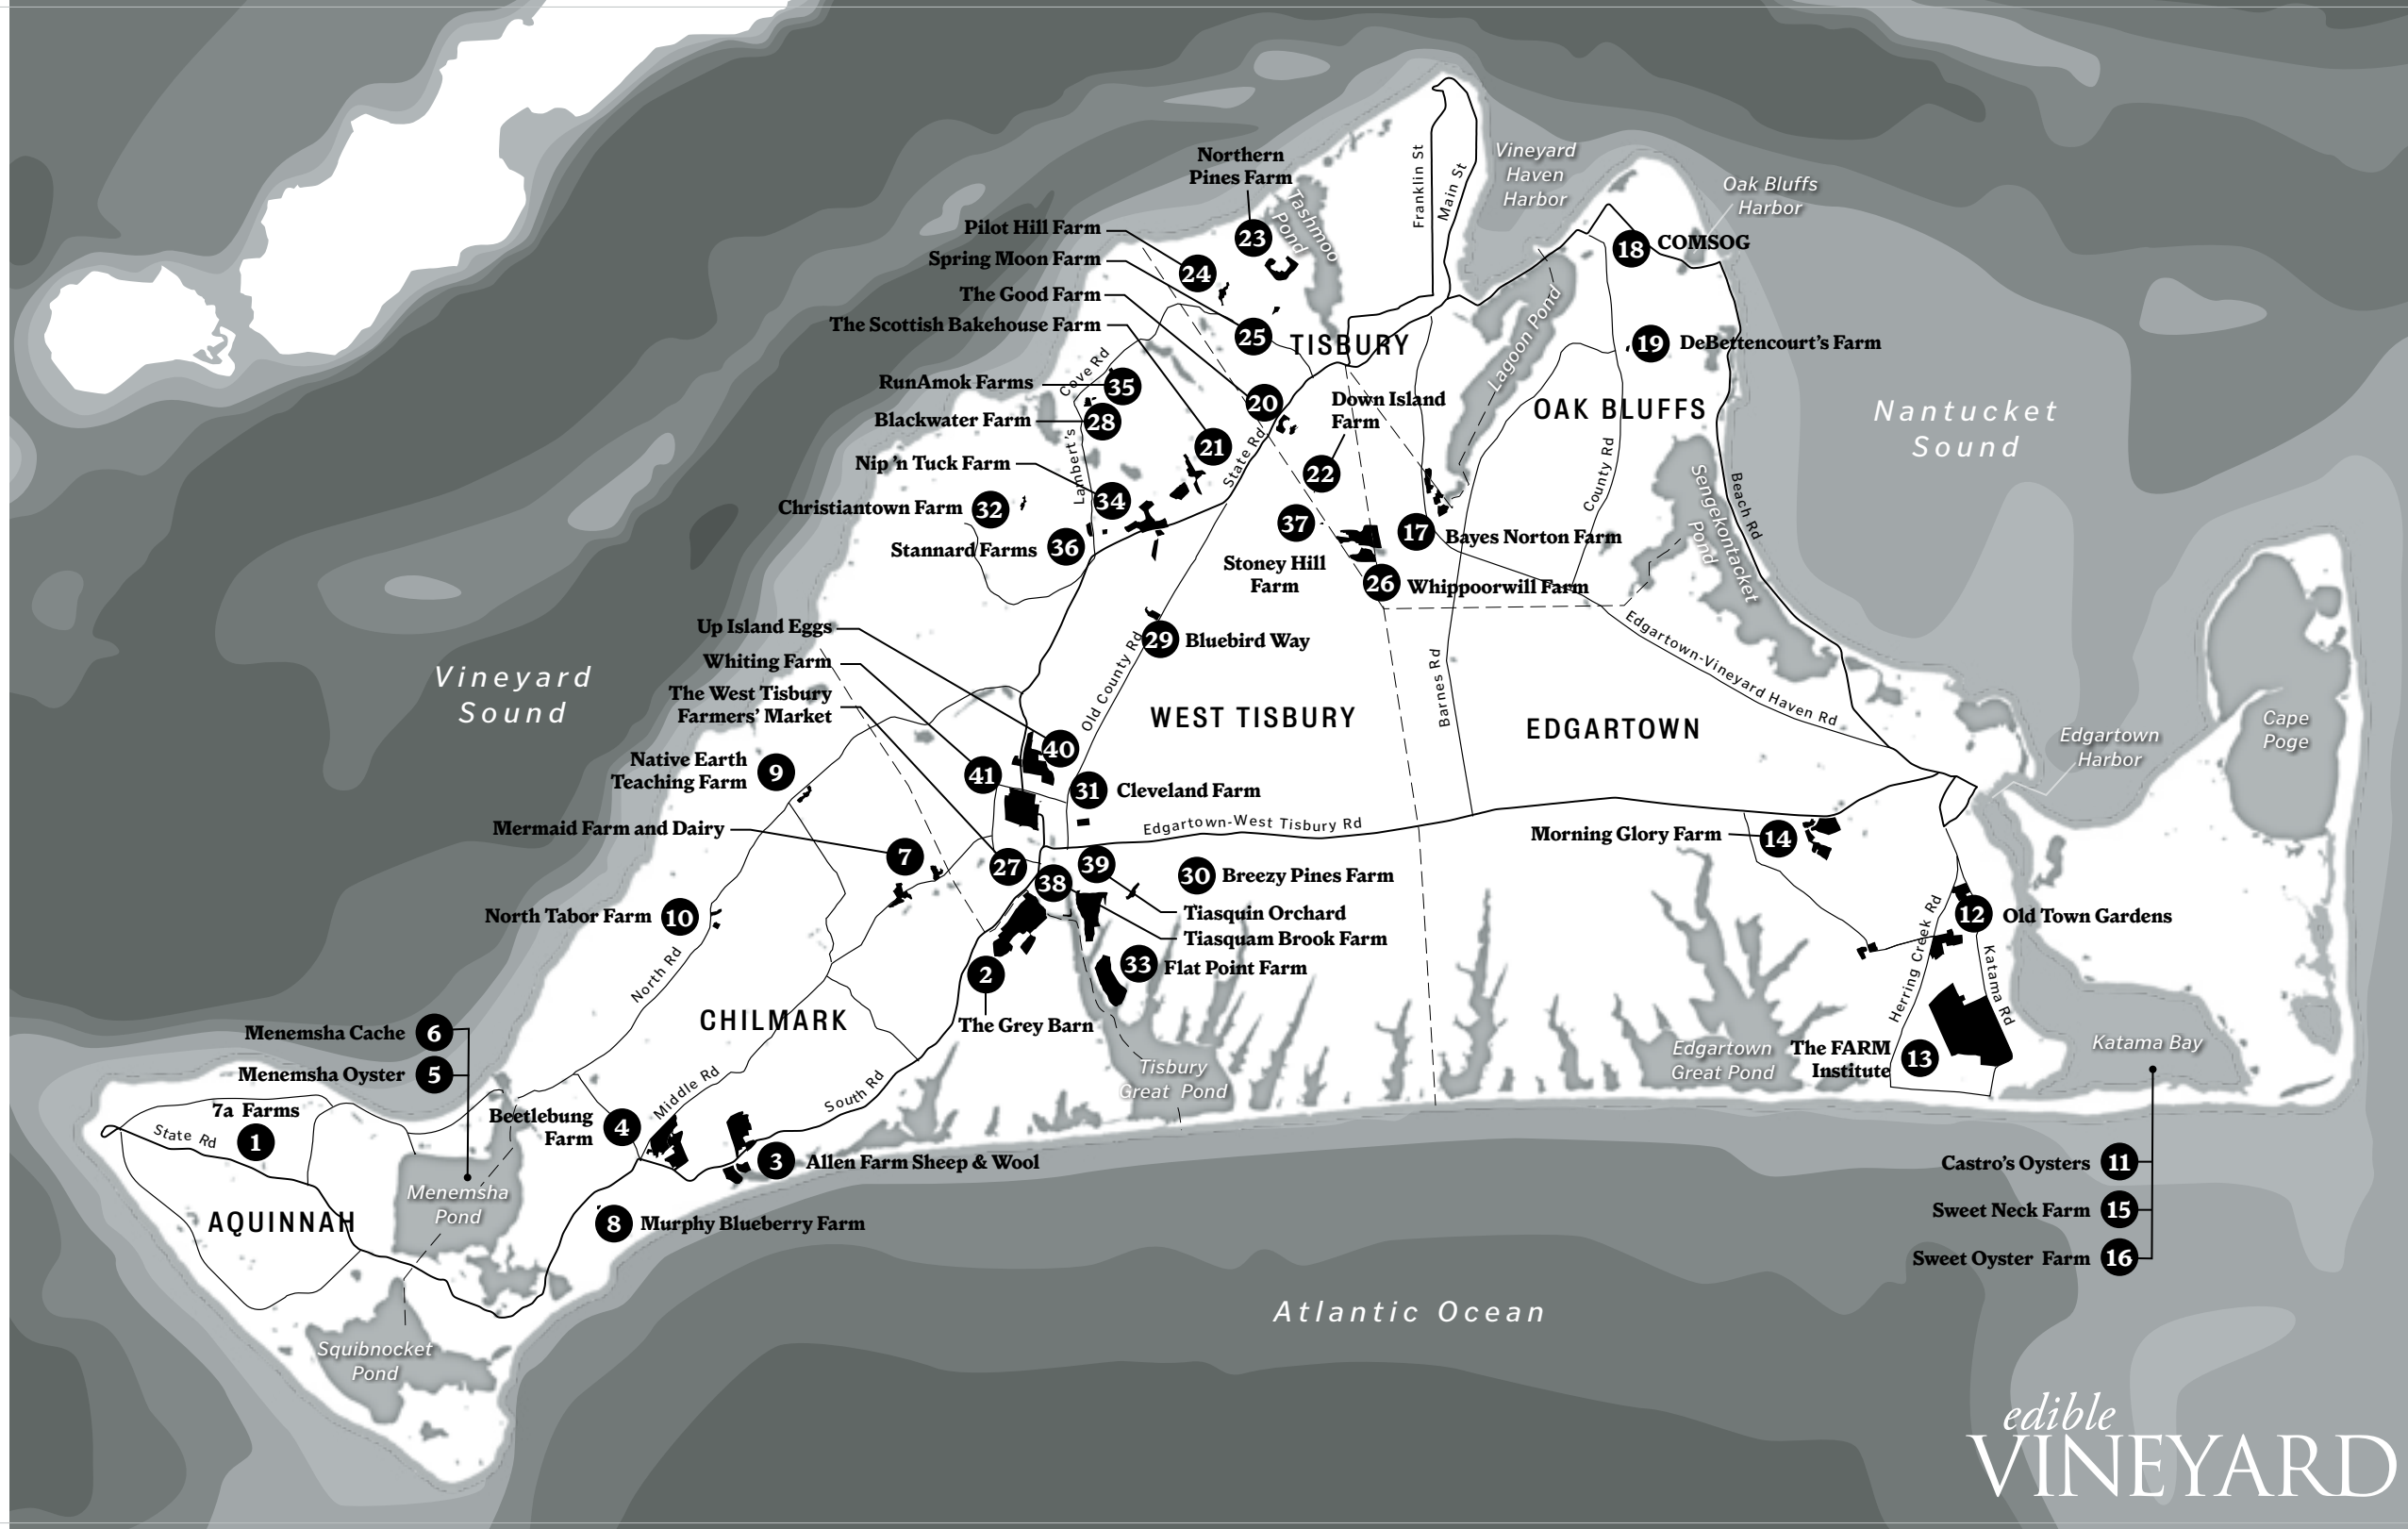

By supporting local farmers, you are supporting open working space—fields and pastures. Young farmers raise food on conservation lands; Island farm families have been stewards of the Island for generations. Working fields supports the local economy, environment, healthy eaters, and healthy communities.

Sustainable agriculture is not a period. There is no end point. It is ongoing—a question, a challenge, an answer, a call to action to grow more safe, local, nutritious food for all. Food that uses less fossil fuels and supports our neighborhoods.

Local food is fresher and tastes better. It's as simple as that. Take this map with you to visit a farm. Ask good questions, eat better, taste the difference.

This map was produced in part by the Martha's Vineyard Commission with special thanks to GIS specialist Chris Seidel.
